

For Funded Partners:

Thanks in advance for helping us spread the word about SCFD's Road to Reauthorization and the stakeholder engagement process! Here is some boilerplate language you can use about the process in your communications.

Boilerplate:

The Scientific and Cultural Facilities District (SCFD) is a nearly 40- year old cultural tax approved by voters in Adams, Arapahoe, Boulder, Broomfield, Denver, Douglas and Jefferson counties that is required to be reauthorized in 2028. Through this tax, just one penny of every $10 spent in the district is collected and distributed to arts, culture and science organizations like (fill in your organization name here), ensuring access to free and discounted cultural experiences for residents. Over the next two years, SCFD and its consultant, GBSM, will facilitate a five-phase Stakeholder Engagement Process to build proposed changes to the funding model and structure to position the region for the next era of SCFD. The proposal will then need to be approved by the SCFD Board and then the Colorado General Assembly before making its way to the November 2028 ballot in the seven counties SCFD operates in. As an SCFD funded partner, (fill in your organization name here) is taking part in this five-phase process to ensure collective impact on this unique funding model.
